1. Introduction

In today's wave of globalization, economic and cultural exchanges between countries have become increasingly frequent, bringing unprecedented development opportunities for all countries [1]. Driven by the "B&R Initiative", the cooperation between China and countries along the route has been deepened in many fields, such as economy, culture and tourism, showing strong vitality and broad development prospects [2]. As important participants in B&R, China and Russia not only have natural advantages in geopolitics, but also have a deep foundation for cooperation in winter tourism and sports culture [3]. With the rise of global winter tourism and the vigorous development of sports culture, how China and Russia can share resources and complement each other through the deep integration of winter tourism economy and sports culture, and jointly promote the prosperity of regional tourism economy and the inheritance of sports culture has become a subject worthy of in-depth study [4]. This study is helpful to deepen the cooperation between China and Russia in the fields of winter tourism and sports culture, and can also provide useful reference for other countries and regions. Therefore, it has important theoretical significance and practical value.

In recent years, the research on winter tourism and sports culture between China and Russia has gradually increased, but most of them are concentrated in a single field, such as market analysis of winter tourism and comparative research of sports culture [5]. Although these studies provide a certain theoretical basis for the integration and growth of winter tourism economy and sports culture between China and Russia, they lack systematic and comprehensive discussion [6]. Under the background of "B&R" initiative, how to combine the actual situation of the two countries and deeply analyze the related issues of the integration and growth of winter tourism economy and sports culture has become an urgent problem to be solved in current research [7]. On the basis of combing the existing research results, this study will further expand the research horizon and deepen the research content. Through this study, we expect to provide strong theoretical support and practical guidance for the cooperation between China and Russia in the fields of winter tourism and sports culture.

2. China-Russia winter tourism economy and sports culture

2.1. Analysis of winter tourism resources between China and Russia

China and Russia are vast and sparsely populated, with rich and diverse natural landscapes, especially the ice and snow resources in winter. In China, the Linhai Snowfield in Northeast China, the Tianshan Snow Peak in Xinjiang and the grassland snow scene in Inner Mongolia constitute a unique winter tourism picture scroll [8]. These areas are rich in ice and snow culture, and a variety of winter tourism projects have been developed (as shown in Figure 1), attracting many tourists at home and abroad. In Russia, from the vast snowfields in Siberia to the red square snow scene in Moscow, and then to the winter wonders by Lake Baikal, the winter tourism resources are equally rich and unique. Russia's winter tourism pays attention to the display of natural scenery, and at the same time incorporates strong artistic atmosphere and historical and cultural elements (as shown in Figure 1), which have become popular attractions for tourists to rush to punch in.

The winter tourism resources of China and Russia have their own characteristics and complement each other, which provides a solid foundation for the cooperation between the two countries in the field of winter tourism.

2.2. China-Russia sports culture comparison and blending

China and Russia also have profound accumulation and unique style in sports culture. China has a long history of sports culture. Wushu, Tai Chi, table tennis and other traditional sports are deeply loved by the people and gradually spread to the world [9]. In terms of ice-snow sports, China has made remarkable achievements in international competitions such as the Winter Olympics in recent years, and ice-snow sports have gradually become popular, forming a strong ice-snow sports atmosphere. Russia is a sports power, especially in ice-snow sports, such as ice hockey, figure skating, skiing, etc., Russian players have achieved great success in international competitions, showing their strong ice-snow sports strength. The exchange and blending of sports culture between China and Russia has promoted the development of sports in the two countries and built a bridge for the friendship between the two peoples. Driven by the "B&R Initiative", the exchanges and cooperation between Chinese and Russian sports culture have become more frequent, which has injected new vitality into the integration and growth of winter tourism economy and sports culture in the two countries.

2.3. Discussion on the relationship between winter tourism economy and sports culture

The growth of winter tourism economy provides a broad stage and carrier for the spread of sports culture [10]. The development and promotion of winter tourism projects have attracted a large number of tourists and provided an opportunity for the spread of ice-snow sports culture. While participating in winter tourism activities, tourists can also deeply understand and experience the local ice-snow sports culture, thus deepening their understanding and understanding of the two cultures.

The prosperity of sports culture has promoted the growth of winter tourism economy. The holding of ice-snow sports events and the effect of sports stars can effectively enhance the popularity and attraction of ice and snow tourist destinations and promote the prosperity of local tourism. Therefore, in the process of promoting the integration and growth of winter tourism economy and sports culture, China and Russia should give full play to their interaction, realize resource sharing and complementary advantages, and jointly promote the prosperity of regional tourism economy and the inheritance and innovation of sports culture.

3. Present situation and challenges of integrated development

3.1. Analysis of cooperation status

Driven by the "B&R Initiative", China and Russia have made remarkable progress in cooperation in the fields of winter tourism economy and sports culture. The two sides strengthened communication and coordination at the policy level, and jointly held a series of winter tourism festivals, sports events and cultural exchange projects, as shown in Figure 2:

In terms of sports culture, China and Russia have also strengthened exchanges and cooperation and jointly held a number of ice-snow sports events. This effectively promoted the exchange and integration of sports culture between the two countries, and also enhanced the international influence of both sides in the field of ice-snow sports.

3.2. Challenges and development opportunities

At present, there is still an imbalance in the development and utilization of winter tourism resources between the two countries. Some areas are rich in winter tourism resources but under-developed, while some areas are overexploited. This has led to the coexistence of competition and cooperation between the two countries in the winter tourism market, and it is necessary to further strengthen coordination and cooperation. In addition, although both countries have profound sports culture, there are differences in sports events, competition rules and cultural customs, which affects the depth and breadth of sports culture exchange and integration to some extent.

Faced with the above challenges, the integration and development of China-Russia winter tourism economy and sports culture has also ushered in new development opportunities. On the one hand, the deepening of the "B&R Initiative" has provided a broader space and platform for cooperation between the two countries in the field of winter tourism. The two sides can further strengthen policy communication, facilities connectivity, smooth trade, financial intermediation and popular support, and jointly promote the deep integration and growth of winter tourism economy and sports culture. On the other hand, with the continuous expansion of the global winter tourism market and the increasing popularity of sports culture, there is great potential for cooperation between China and Russia in the field of winter tourism and sports culture. The two sides can jointly develop new winter tourism projects, build distinctive sports culture brands, expand international cooperation markets, and achieve mutual benefit and common development. China and Russia can also improve the intelligent and personalized level of winter tourism services by means of modern science and technology, and provide tourists with a more convenient, comfortable and safe travel experience.

This includes strengthening training in tourism professionals, improving tourism service facilities and improving tourism safety. Both sides should also increase investment in infrastructure construction to provide tourists with a more convenient, comfortable and safe tourism environment.

In this way, the attraction and competitiveness of China-Russia winter tourism economy and sports culture can be enhanced.

4.4. Strengthen marketing and brand building

Marketing promotion and brand building are the key links to promote the integration and growth of winter tourism economy and sports culture between China and Russia. The two sides should jointly strengthen marketing efforts, use various channels and platforms to publicize the winter tourism resources and sports and cultural characteristics of China and Russia, and attract more tourists to experience. Both sides should pay attention to brand building, build brands of winter tourism and sports culture with Chinese and Russian characteristics, and enhance the popularity and reputation of winter tourism and sports culture in both countries. For example: "China-Russia Ice and Snow Tour" and "China-Russia Ice and Snow Culture Festival". After strengthening market promotion and brand building, the influence and market share of China-Russia winter tourism economy and sports culture can be expanded.

4.5. Promote sustainable development and cultural exchanges

The integrated development of China-Russia winter tourism economy and sports culture should adhere to the concept of sustainable development and pay attention to ecological environment protection and cultural inheritance. The two sides should jointly formulate the sustainable development strategy of winter tourism and sports culture, strengthen ecological environment protection measures, and ensure the rational utilization and long-term protection of winter tourism resources. China and Russia can also strengthen cultural exchanges and enhance the understanding and friendship between the two peoples by exchanging students, artists and sports coaches. This will lay a solid folk foundation for the integration and growth of winter tourism economy and sports culture between China and Russia.

5. Conclusions

The integration and growth of winter tourism economy and sports culture between China and Russia is of far-reaching significance to the two countries themselves. It has opened up a new path for regional and even global tourism and sports cooperation. This cooperation has promoted the optimal allocation of winter tourism resources and the deep blending of sports culture between the two countries, and enhanced the international competitiveness of the two sides in the winter tourism market and sports culture. By jointly building winter tourism brands and holding high-level ice-snow sports events and cultural activities, China and Russia not only enriched their respective tourism product systems, but also showed the world the unique charm of the integration and growth of winter tourism and sports culture.

In the future, the two sides should go hand in hand to jointly promote the high-quality integration and growth of winter tourism economy and sports culture, and contribute wisdom and strength to building a community of human destiny.
