Abstract: The cultivation of youth fairness is of great significance to the promotion of socialist core values. Conversely, the use of socialist core values to cultivate the fairness of youth groups also plays an important role. In this article, from theory to practice, the relationship between the two is analyzed. After pointing out the status quo and problems of the important view of justice for college students as a whole, several suggestions are put forward.

1. Introduction

Since the 18th CPC National Congress, the country has attached great importance to the ideological and moral education of youth groups. Only recently has the Party Central Committee introduced the significance of a socialist moral construction project, which has important guiding significance for cultivating the moral sense of youth groups. General Secretary Xi Jinping has repeatedly emphasized that it is a very important subject to integrate socialist core values into student education, as the most important group of young people, and to impart justice education throughout. Therefore, this article takes the impact of socialist core values on the fairness of youth as a starting point, theoretically analyzes the connotation of the youth's overall sense of justice, and puts forward in practice suggestions to cultivate socialist core values to foster youth's fairness.

2. On the concept of justice and education

The public can be used interchangeably with justice in many cases, so explaining justice is largely explaining justice. Regarding justice, there is a lot of research whether it is Western classics or modern research. The concept of justice is a kind of value recognition and judgment based on justice. Specifically, the so-called concept of justice is the fundamental or systematic view of people on "what is justice" or "what is justice" under specific historical conditions, and is a philosophical reflection on the nature, purpose, requirements, and standard of justice. Our famous philosopher Gao Qinghai summarized the connotation of justice as people's views and opinions on the value evaluation of people's lives according to the principles of justice. People's different positions will choose different criteria to evaluate justice. Therefore, first of all, the object of the concept of justice is man and society made up of people, but not vague, abstract, ordinary people and society. If people are isolated from each other, there is no question of justice. Only by starting with the concept, can we promote adult behavior change.

Education is a social practice that trains and shapes people, and is aimed at promoting human development and social progress. Broadly speaking, all activities that can improve people's knowledge and skills and affect people's ideological and moral level are education. Regarding the education of the concept of justice, we believe that it is an educational practice activity in which the educator trains the educated to establish the concept of justice and guides the educated to practice the concept of justice. The Marxist concept of justice is not only an overall concern for the development of human society, but also a full respect for the freedom and equality of individuals. It is the spiritual essence of Marxist philosophy to pay attention to the living conditions of human beings, to pursue the unity of human individual development and social progress, and to achieve human liberation and comprehensive development. Marxist concept of justice is a scientific concept of justice. To educate college students on the concept of justice is to train college students to establish a Marxist concept of justice, guide young college students to improve their individual moral virtues, and promote a just society.

3. The Status Quo and Influencing Factors of Youth's Sense of Justice—Based on the Survey and Analysis of College Students' Sense of Justice

3.1 Current status of contemporary youth's sense of justice

College students are the most important youth group, and college students' concept of justice can basically be used to recognize the youth group's concept of justice. This paper randomly distributed 500 questionnaires to colleges and universities in a certain area, and obtained the following data and conclusions. First, there is little relationship between justice and gender. Second, most college students have a positive attitude towards the current society and have the emotional foundation to cultivate a sense of justice. Third, college students regard justice as an excellent quality, which provides the possibility to promote and cultivate sense of justice. Fourth, the strength of college students' sense of justice varies in different scenarios.

Through the above survey, we can also find out the current problems of justice among college students. As far as the concept of justice for college students is concerned, although the mainstream is positive, there are still issues that cannot be ignored. One is that the perception of justice is vague, and some college students lack their own views on what is moral, just, and mean, vulgar. Second, justice and indifference. Under the influence of utilitarianism and pragmatism, they pay more attention to their future and development, not to the fate of others, and to social progress and public welfare. On the whole, contemporary college students are lacking in moral responsibility, social justice, self-honour and disgrace, and happiness in life. Thirdly, the lack of righteous will and the lack of righteous behaviors is a direct manifestation of some college students' incorrect study attitudes, unclear goals, unexcused absences, late departures and early departures, and cheating in exams.

3.2 Factors affecting youth justice

First, it is affected by the ideological trend of plural society. Under the conditions of an open socialist market economy, extreme individualism, money worship, hedonism, utilitarianism, pragmatism and other social ideological trends in western culture have flowed in in an equal and diverse manner, causing college students who are in the replacement period of old and new moral concepts. , More inclined to choose between various values, some plausible wrong concepts of justice, dressed in the coat of new concepts, has blurred the cognitive orientation of college students. The second is the dissolution of the social moral atmosphere. Social moral indifference dispels college students' perception of justice and behavioral orientation, and at the same time, due to the existence of many injustices and behaviors in the society, it suppresses the college students' righteous emotions to a certain extent and makes college students' negative attitudes to social injustice and behavior Agree ". Third, the education of the concept of justice is relatively lacking. At present, there are still many factors that are not conducive to the development and change of college students' concept of justice, such as insufficient attention to education. Fourth, family education and school education are insufficient. Parents with a lack of sense of justice can hardly produce children with a sense of justice. Our school education is dominated by the test, and academic performance becomes the sole criterion for evaluating a student's comprehensive quality, and sense of justice is a core element that sustains the sustainable development of a social community. Being neglected. Fifth, the laws and systems to defend justice are not yet complete. Affected by factors such as inadequate reform, some legal systems have themselves become the accomplices of social injustice, and it is easy to set obstacles to the justice practice of individuals with a sense of justice.

4. The significance of socialist core values leading young people's fair education

4.1 Value analysis of justice education for college students

With the acceleration of China's reform and opening up and the pace of modernization, the interest relationship has been further adjusted and differentiated. The gap between the rich and the poor, the urban-rural gap, and the regional gap have widened, which has seriously undermined social justice. At the same time, the profound changes in ideology and concepts, people's independent consciousness and progressive spirit have been strengthened, and increasingly diverse cultures and diverse social lives have made people lack the necessary awareness and ability to discern ideologies and concepts. Therefore, strengthening the education of college students' concept of justice is of great significance for cultivating newcomers of the times.

First, fair education is the need to improve the moral virtue and sound personality of college students. The concept of justice not only requires people to understand certain principles of justice, but also requires them to practice the principles of justice. Through education on the concept of justice, college students can fully understand why justice and its effect on people, and have a profound sense of justice, so as to enhance the motivation of justice and promote justice. Second, fair education is the need to build a harmonious socialist society. The socialist harmonious society we are building should be a society with democracy, the rule of law, fairness and justice, good faith and love, full of vitality, stability and order, and harmony between man and nature. Fairness and justice as the core values of socialism are indispensable. Only discern justice, form a correct conception of justice, in order to maintain justice in the practice of man as man. Contemporary college students are the backbone of China's socialist modernization drive force. To obtain the concept of justice, we must not only rely on self-sponsored learning, but also external guidance and education. Education of college students on the concept of justice is fundamentally to promote the healthy growth of college students and cultivate socialist successors with good moral character. Finally, fair education is the need to cultivate and implement the core values of socialism. Prosperity, democracy, civilization, and harmony, advocating freedom, equality, justice, the rule of law, patriotism, dedication, integrity, and friendliness are the basic contents of socialist core values. The cultivation and practice of core values is a process of gradual understanding, accumulation, and consensus formation. It is a basic project and a soul project. It is helpful for college students to form a correct understanding of fairness and justice at the social level and to stimulate college students' passion for patriotism and socialism.

4.2 Significance of Cultivating College Students' Sense of Justice

First, the cultivation of a sense of justice is conducive to the overall improvement of the comprehensive quality of college students. The sense of justice should become the core quality of college students. The reason is that on the one hand, it is about whether a college student has courage, backbone, ambition, and righteousness; on the other hand, college students are the backbone of society and the country's future undertakings. The lack of justice This means that they may not follow the rules and refuse to play a super role. This will inevitably affect the establishment of a just society and even the future of the country. Without the sense of justice as the soul and the main line, the development of other qualities of college students may be a waste or even a burden on society.

Second, the cultivation of college students' sense of justice can promote the construction of a harmonious campus. The current university campus is plagued by various negative problems, including the worrying mental health of college students, the distant relationship between teachers and students, the indifferent relationship between classmates, and the dissatisfaction of college students with the campus environment. As a sentimental emotion based on the justice system and principles, under the rendering and effect of a sense of justice, when justice and harmony become its dominant atmosphere, it will further have a demonstration effect on the entire society and also be conducive to socialist harmony Construction of society.

Third, the cultivation of college students' sense of justice is conducive to maintaining public safety. College students are at the golden age of life. If members of this group can actively implement justice behaviors driven by a sense of justice, it will help build positive and stable social relationships. In fact, in a well-coordinated and loving community, each group will be given certain responsibilities and roles according to its abilities. Respecting the old and loving the young is the role that society gives to young people.

Fourth, the cultivation of university students' sense of justice is conducive to improving the image of the nation and enhancing the soft power of the country. A sense of justice is both a business card for citizen quality and a cohesive agent for multi-ethnic nations. The sense of justice is not only the main content of the national spirit, but also an important component of the country's soft power. Facing the differences between the good and bad of the national quality, improving the sense of justice of college students will undoubtedly help to influence the people around them with their own actions, thereby improving the social unhealthy trend and fostering a good national spirit. At the same time, the improvement of college students' sense of justice is also very helpful to improve the image of the nation and the charm of Chinese culture.

5. Strategies for Cultivating the Fair Quality of Youth with Socialist Core Values

The core value concept of socialism is a social concept advocated by the state and a systematic value system. The core values of socialism help to guide the youth group to form a correct view of justice and benefit, and then strengthen the concept of justice. You can start with the following aspects.

5.1 Form a training system that leads to fair education with core values.

The cultivation of college students' sense of justice is a systematic project, which requires the concerted function of family, school and society. We must pay attention to the impact of family education, and let parents bear the responsibility of education for justice. Schools must become the main front for fostering a sense of justice, and the education sector must have a positive impact on the development of a sense of justice, guide the youth group to popularize the right dress, practice the concept of justice, and combine with the reality of college students' concept of justice education, they should always adhere to directionality. Principles, truth-seeking principles, motivation principles and demonstration principles. Colleges and universities must stand at the height of social responsibility and attach importance to the cultivation of college students' sense of justice. Otherwise, it will not only affect the realization of the talent training goals of both colleges and universities, but also the realization of the improvement of citizen's sense of justice in the whole society may become distant.

5.2 Establish and improve laws and systems to uphold justice.

As the yardstick of people's daily behavior, whether laws and systems can reflect justice has a guiding effect on people's behavior. Just laws and institutions are themselves a lively textbook. Therefore, we must clean up and amend laws and systems that violate justice, and ensure that the rights and obligations of each citizen are unified, so as to compete within a fair institutional framework. As a high-quality group, college students have a strong ability to interpret and study laws and systems. A fair system can not only escort college students' righteous behaviors, but also inspire college students to follow the principles of justice.

5.3 Create a social atmosphere that promotes a sense of justice.

A just society must also be a healthy and harmonious society. Therefore, we should transform the social environment through practical activities, promote as much as possible people and things with a sense of justice on information transmission carriers such as television, movies, and network media, and provide more warm news to give the audience positive inspiration. It is necessary to resolutely condemn moral injustices and severe punishment for violations of the law in order to make a difference. Appropriate understanding and consideration should be given to the improper consequences of a just act, whether it is public opinion or judicial practice.

5.4 Integrate the socialist core value system into school education.

The socialist core value system affects the development of contemporary college students. It is very unwise to ignore the huge impact of political teaching on young people. It is necessary to integrate the socialist core value system into political teaching, and through reading and comprehension of political textbooks, students should have a deeper understanding of the content of socialist core value system and its important role. It is necessary to train political teachers, integrate the socialist core value system into political teaching, from shallow to deep, from simple to complex and targeted teaching, so that the complex socialist core values guide young people's words and deeds.

6. Conclusion

Youth is the future of the motherland. If youth groups lack a sense of justice, the development of the country will be disastrous. Fairness and justice is an important content of the core value of socialism. Therefore, the guidance of core values of socialism will be of great significance to promote the formation of justice among young students. Therefore, it is necessary to establish a systematic value-leading work system, integrate fair education into schools, society and other aspects, and promote social fairness and justice through value guidance.
